His music is the ideal soundtrack both for a romantic evening beneath the stars and for driving down an endless highway into the sunset in a 1965 Ford Mustang convertible. But Nick Mellow's songs are so much more than the right musical backdrop to life's most memorable moments. They are stories from the life of a guy in his mid-twenties to which you can relate in a number of different ways. Authentic, touching, and catchy, Nick Mellow just keeps on singing his way into the hearts of his listeners.

Nick Mellow was a musical talent even as a small child. He started playing the violin at the age of seven. As a teenager, he began playing both the guitar and the drums. Nick Mellow trained in a music shop and taught himself how to play the guitar using YouTube videos during his lunch breaks. In particular, he focused on fingerstyle, a technique used by the likes of Ben Howard, Newton Faulkner, and John Mayer, where the strings are plucked with the fingers and the entire instrument is used for percussive elements. Nick Mellow has often said that John Mayer has always been his model and inspiration.

In the summer of 2013, Nick Mellow released his debut single, "Complete", on his own, without the support of a record company. Two years later, he followed up with his first EP Heartblind. Thanks to the title track and the single "Airplane", Nick was introduced to a wider audience, and the radio started playing his songs. In the spring of 2017, he released the single "Wait and See" and made it into the Top 100 of the Swiss Airplay Charts. On 3 November 2017, the single "Arrows Fly" was released, heralding his upcoming first album, which will be released on 23 March 2018 on Phonag Records.

Nick Mellow took a chance, even though he had no idea where it would take him. Now he proudly holds his debut album, Wait and See, in his hands and is all fired up and ready to conquer the pop world.
